THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Unthinkable To Fail

Washington, March 18. IT IS, perhaps, natural that members of Congress should be aghast at the proposals which President Truman has laid in their laps—that there should be confusion and hesitation among them. For the end immensely important foreign policy for the United States, the ultimate results of which cannot be accurately foreseen by anyone. However, at the worst, they will not resemble the dreadful picture some of our more panicky politicians are painting—and even, in the long run, may pay dividends in peace and prosperity. In brief, there is no sense in anyone losing his head about them.

STARTING with the distressing inability of the British any longer to stand up under their commitments, the facts had only partially been assimilated by either Congress or the country when Mr. Truman made the situation bare in his message. Bluntly pointing out the threat to American security if Greece and Turkey drift, or are driven, into chaos and communism he requested authority to buttress these trembling countries with money and materials. Concededly, it is a perilous path which we are asked to take, and it is easy to understand the feeling of many who would rather not tread it—Mr. of whom undoubtedly is Mr. Truman.

BUT this is no time for wild talk from jittery statesmen or small Basing their decision on what they considered the stronger arguments following a debate at the meeting of Plumsteadville Grange, Friday evening, the judges rendered their verdict in favor of the affirmative team.

The question for debate at the meeting, which was attended by 60 persons, was "Resolved, That Ambition is More Essential to the Farmer Than Education." The affirmative side was represented by

RUSSIA'S "BAWLING-OUT"

Not since the late President Roosevelt delivered his "stab in the back" attack upon Italy after Mussolini's invasion of France has any American spokesman indicted a foreign power in such vigorous and unforgivable terms as President Truman used against Russia.

The most rabid anti-Communist has rarely gone further in criticism and condemnation.

The language was "fighting language"—wars have started for much less.

And it is language which Russia, during many long years, has been wholly unaccustomed to hearing from our White House.

President Roosevelt was a great friend and admirer of Russia. His fondness for that nation dictated most of his foreign, and much of his domestic, policy. He recognized Russia, refused to help the League of Nations when the Finnish episode led that organization to protest Russian aggression, saw to it that the conduct of World War II helped Russia to the maximum, went to bat before the world with his "great experiment" of Russian appeasement.

Even when Russia sided in with Hitler, and stole half of Poland, allying herself against the Anglo-American fusion then in process, Roosevelt dealt with Russia as being merely misguided—not as unfaithful or essentially evil.

During all the terms of President Roosevelt, Communism was apologized for. Praise of the Russia system was heard from the highest places in the nation. Communists who had lied their way into America to work for the overthrow of our government were protected from the law. Thousands of Communists and fellow-travellers found sanctuary working on the payroll of the nation they were seeking to undermine.

In recent days, there has been much talk of the Russian "expansions and aggressions." Yet much the most important of these were granted by President Roosevelt, even when their scope made it necessary for him to reveal that the Atlantic Charter (with the provisions of which these concessions clearly clashed) had no real existence.

At Teheran and at Yalta, with the support of the President, Stalin was given openly and officially the custody of dozens of small neutral countries to which Russia had no conceivable right or title. They included Poland, half of Germany, Finland, the

UNITED STATES WILL REJECT RUSSIA'S DEMAND FOR ANNULMENT OF ECONOMIC MERGER OF U. S. AND BRITISH ZONES

By Kingsbury Smith

(European General Manager, I.N.S.)

MOSCOW, Mar. 18.—(INS)—Authoritative American sources said today that the United States will reject flatly Russia's demand for annulment of the economic merger of United States and British occupation zones in Germany.

A highly placed member of the American delegation to the Moscow Big Four conference said that the U. S. is willing to expand the Anglo-American merger into economic unification of the entire German nation provided Russia accepts the basic principles outlined yesterday by Secretary of State George C. Marshall.

The American statesman called for elimination of zonal barriers except to mark areas of the 4-power military occupation.

This source pointed out that if the Big Four fail to reach an agreement on economic unification the limit of the German nation's capacity to pay under a peaceful economy.

Meanwhile the American delegation is waiting to see whether Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov will supply the information demanded by Marshall as a prerequisite to U. S. agreement on over-all economic unification.

This includes the value of plants the Soviets removed from their occupation zone of Germany as well as the manner in which title to these plants was acquired.

Inside Your Congress

Letter To Congress

—by—

NAMUEL B. PETTENGILL

"The Gentlemen from Indiana"

Dear Congressman:

Why not get on top of a winning issue? Unless present signs change, you are going to miff it.

The closed shop is one issue that the folks have an overwhelming opinion about. The public is against it; workingmen, generally, are against it; even labor union members show a majority, or a large minority, against it. For more than five years, this has been proven time and again. In the Southern states, opposition to the closed shop is especially strong, as shown by recent action of their legislatures.

The last poll by Gallup on January 20, 1947, shows that of those expressing an opinion, 72 per cent of all voters are against either the closed or union shop. It showed that 44 per cent of union members are also opposed.

Are the G.O.P. leaders in Congress so buffeted by the labor bosses so that they are going to refuse to champion something that 44 per cent of union members, and 72 per cent of the voters, want you to do?

Diamond-studded horse-shoes are not offered to Congressmen more often in a blue moon. On most issues you have only a whispering prayer that you will alight on the winning side.

SURVEY SHOWS 171 WANT TO BUY HOUSES HERE

Chamber of Commerce Data Reveals That 56 Want To Spend $7,000 Each

49 FIX PRICE AT $3,500

44 Are Interested In Residences Costing Up To $4,500 Each

In a recent housing survey conducted by the Bristol Chamber of Commerce among 29 industrial firms in Bristol and surrounding areas, a total of 171 persons indicated a desire to purchase homes in this section.

This information was presented by the survey committee at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Chamber, held last evening in the McCrory Building.

Fifty-six of the 171 were interested in purchasing homes in the $7,000 group; 49 were interested in homes costing up to $4,500. Three questionnaires showed a desire to purchase in the $8,000 to $10,000 bracket; and one questionnaire revealed that one person was interested in buying a home in the $15,000 class.

Committee reports and regular business consumed the major portion of the meeting time last evening. Groundwork was laid for several programs to be developed within the next few weeks.

Louis Dries, newly-elected member of the Board, was introduced to Board members last evening. President A. H. Queen was in charge of the meeting.

Edward Nelbauer, chairman of the slogan committee, said that the current contest conducted by the Chamber closed at midnight last night. The committee will now begin its work of selecting the winners. Hundreds of entries have been received from the students of the public and parochial schools of Bristol Borough and Bristol Township.

Selected As One of Most Photogenic Dance Pupils

The Photo Screen Guild, a service for dancing schools and their pupils, after asking countless dancing academies in the United States to submit photos of pupils (one portrait type and one showing type of work pupil capable of doing), selected 53 in all from the thousands throughout the country as being "most photogenic." Irene was one of the two chosen from Pennsylvania academies. According to information given by the Guild "the winners of this contest will be given a service that would cost them at least $20 a month if they were here in Hollywood. This service is free to the winners. We have had a copy of Irene's picture made and this will be sent to the different casting offices with a notation that she was chosen from hundreds of pictures as the most photogenic. The winners' pictures will be entered in photogenic contests held here to give them a chance at a movie career. This service will be good for one year at no charge. In the entire United States we have had only 53 winners from thousands of pictures sent in."

Irene is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry McDermott, Suite Rd., Plaza Park, Burlington, N. J.

Pupils of the Granzow Academy sent pictures to the Guild over a period of four months. They are registered and classified for talent scouts and dance directors to see.

$200,000 Blaze at Simpson

Simpson, Pa.—Damage was estimated at $200,000 today in the wake of a blaze that destroyed Fell Township high school, at Simpson, and damaged seven homes. Cause of the general alarm fire, which was fought by firemen from six communities, was not determined. School authorities said all records and supplies in the two-story brick school were destroyed as flames raced through the building.

Union Head Wounded; Wife Assassinated

Chicago—James Crowley, 42, president of the Chicago Bartenders Union, was seriously wounded and his wife, Elizabeth, 44, was killed early today by assassins who shot them in front of their home. Crowley was taken to a hospital with bullet wounds in his right shoulder and arm. He is expected to recover. His wife was shot in the left temple and killed instantly.

Police, recalling that the Bartenders and Dispensers Union, Local 503 (AFL) was once known as a "football" of the old Al Capone syndicate, immediately began a check on syndicate activities. Crowley said he and his wife had attended a social program at a downtown hotel and drove in their automobile to their home on Chicago's south side. Mrs. Crowley was at the wheel, he asserted. "Suddenly all hell broke loose. I don't know exactly what happened." Detective Thomas Moore said there were five bullet holes in the window on the driver's side of the car. He believed they were made by a machine gun.

WHAT HAS BEEN LEARNED

The Navy's Antarctic expedition headed by Admiral Byrd was announced as a test of the ability of men and material to mount military operations in conditions of extreme cold. What has been learned?

First and foremost, it has been demonstrated that water-borne supplies in Polar regions are not only possible but extremely practicable. Rear Admiral Cruzen, operational commander of the task force, asserts: "We have illustrated by our penetration of the ice pack with steel ships, by our record-breaking establishment of an air-operations base on ice in less than seven days, and by operational achievements from that base, the mobility in both Poles is both desirable and easily capable of achievement."

The sun has given the task force its first warning wink of the approaching Antarctic winter. It is in the nature of a full-fledged sunset. Now the sun will set for longer and longer periods until it will make its last appearance of the season April 22. Down there the first sunset is a virtual command to flee or freeze, because in the ensuing winter of night the temperature drops to 70 below zero.

The Navy's task force has learned much, but it still is in the dark on the great majority of weather problems and on polar navigation. Weather still is the great polar imponderable and until a whole succession of expeditions is able to chart here and there a norm in its utter unpredictability, flexibility must keynote all attempts at military operations either at the top or bottom of the world.

TWO-TERM LIMIT

With similar constitutional amendments safely through both branches of Congress, the American people have been assured a chance to pass on a proposal limiting the number of years any future President may serve. There should be no difficulty in ironing out differences between the two measures as both have the same goal.

To become effective, the amendment must be ratified by three-fourths of the states within the next seven years. If the Senate vote is indicative of sentiment in the country as a whole, it will meet this deadline without the slightest difficulty. Several more Senators than were needed to make up the necessary two-thirds margin voted in favor of the amendment and there were a number of Democrats among them.

There were certain advantages to the old system, under which tradition barred the way to a third presidential term, which will be lost under the new amendment.
The American people as a whole, and quite regardless of partisanship, probably would like to be able to return to the old arrangement.

But that is quite impossible.
The tradition is no longer an effective barrier to a chief executive who seeks to perpetuate himself in office. A new one must be erected and the only feasible means available is amendment of the Consti-

Baltic States, much of Austria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria—not to forget, over on the other side of the world, the Kuriles Islands.

After all these long years of apology and appeasement, the pendulum has swung to the far opposite extreme.

As for Russia's finger in Greek politics, President Truman had this to say:

"The very existence of the Greek state is today threatened by the terrorists activities of several thousand armed men, led by Communists . . ."

As to broad American policy, the President observed that one of its primary objectives is "life free from coercion"—a barb at Russia. In warning of what must be done to attain this goal, he spoke of "aggressive movements that seek to impose upon them totalitarian regimes"; an even more direct indictment of the Russian leadership.

References to "totalitarian regimes," which, in view of the subject of his address, could apply only to Russia, were numerous. They are being "imposed on free peoples, by direct or indirect aggression," thereby undermining the peace of the world. They are being "forced upon" various peoples "against their will."

References to the "coercion and intimidation" by Russian agents which marked recent elections in Poland, Rumania and Bulgaria pointed still more directly to Russia.

Summarizing the Russian concept of government, again not mentioned by name but unmistakably worded, the President described it as follows:

"The second way of life is based upon the will of a minority forcibly imposed upon the majority. It relies upon terror and oppression, a controlled press and radio, fixed elections, and the suppression of personal freedoms."

Coming closer to home, where the question of the extent to which Russian Fifth Columnists have succeeded in infiltrating into our government, instruments of public opinion, and social structure, is one of the most sensitive phases of the whole problem, the President mentioned the use of "such subterfuges as political infiltration."

And concerning the broad subject of the ideology of Communism, which is a doctrine that has deeply infected much of the thinking of the American people, he had this to say:

"The seeds of totalitarian regimes are nurtured by misery and want. They spread and grow in the evil soil of poverty and strife. They reach their full growth when the hope of a people for a better life has died."

In this connection, the only point which he did not bring out is that the Communists know, better than anyone, what soil their doctrines flourish in; that they are adept at preparing that soil for their seeds; and that they have been cultivating the American ground, from the inside, for a generation, aided and sheltered at every step by the New Deal in preparation for Communizing this nation by precisely the method the President mentions.

The Great Game of Politics

partisanship from narrow ones. If ever there was a time to rise above politics and cast aside small considerations, this is it. If ever there was a moment to face realities, it has arrived. What should be plain to every American—particularly in Congress—is that Mr. Truman has not shrunk from facing them. His position has been taken with great reluctance; but if he had taken any other he would have been damned—and with justice—as craven, inadequate, uncomprehending. And it always should be most clearly recognized that the "loan" is not one Mr. Truman wanted to recommend—the responsibility one which he would like to have avoided. Yet he has not flinched from it.

Clearly, the decision could not be shirked the step was forced upon us by a series of dismaying events over which we had no control. Nor are the views expressed by the President merely his own views. They are also those of Senators of State Marshall, former Secretary of State Byrnes, Under Secretary Acheson, Senator Vandenburg, Mr. Dulles and a vast majority of informed and intelligent men of both parties throughout the country. Risky, expensive and disturbance though the Truman course may be, the alternatives, all of which have been weighed prayer-fully as well as carefully, are so much more dangerous and costly that few care to contemplate them.
It is significant that in the political arena in the journalistic field, the really violent opposition comes from the extreme isolationists among the Republicans and the Democratic pro-Soviet radicals, such as Mr. Henry Wallace and the egregious Senator Pepper.

The vehement arguments (close to the party line in the Daily Worker) of this strange combination ought to commend the Truman proposals to enlightened men in both parties and to the people as a whole. Actually, as Mr. Vandenburg has declared, it is unthinkable that Congress should fail to support the President on this momentous issue. Such a failure would exhibit the United States in an utterly deplorable light. It would advertise a disunity, timidity and capitulation in foreign affairs disastrous as well as humiliating. The strength of our representative at the Moscow Conference, General Marshall would be undermined.
The United Nations would be entitled by deliberate relinquishment of a leadership vital to its being. Our ill-wishers all over the world would be gratified and encouraged. The ultimate consequences could be calamitous in the extreme.

Most trenchantly Mr. Truman made the point that the fundamental issue in Greece and Turkey is the same for which we went to war against Germany and Japan—to prevent the oppression of a free people by aggressive totalitarian states. His proposals are consistent with our professions, pretensions and promises. And they are the logical outcome of our stand at every international conference. It is of course a regrettable that we must follow this path but a prudent ward for our own safety alone.

When to Use Eye Shadows

Choose a becoming shade of eye shadow and apply with care.

By HELEN FOLLETT

HAVE you ever played with eye shadows? The conservative young lady is definitely afraid of them. Well, maybe they are not for her. Certainly they are not for the timid little mousey girl; they throw her out of character. But on the girl who has flair, who knows her cosmetic lessons, a little eyelid pigment gives an air of pleasing mystery, lights her countenance, makes her feel that she has a place in the front ranks of the modern parade.

The feminine face can stand just so much batik and no more, though some of our bedizened femmes haven't found that out yet. When rouge is not used, it is wise to apply powder that has a rosy cast, unless one is lucky enough to carry natural coloring.
We wonder why, when we know so much about the rules of health, and the importance of outdoor exercise.

Blue Eye Shadow

Blue-eyed beauties take to blue shadows, but must be careful that the blue of the lids does not dim the blue sparkle of the eyes. Sometimes a delicate mauve is more effective, or even a light touch of the rouge compact.

What the red head can do with jade shadows you would never believe. They are in such glorious contrast to the flaming tresses that they call attention to it. With what care and delicacy must they be applied! Not too much, not too little. Never drawn beyond the tip of the eyebrow, never extending entirely to the eyebrow.
A little heavier along the lashes, you please. Then a fade-away.

For brunettes, there are blue and lovely shades of bronze. And as new jewel shades are offered, nail polish, so are these soft glowing colors found among eye pigments.

COMMUNICATION

Editor, Courier:

I agree with Rip Kelly on all of his points why the playoff games of the Bristol Basketball League should not be played on the Bristol High School court, and should not be played three nights in succession.
I don't see why they should want to change from the Rohm & Haas court to Bristol High since Rohm & Haas gave them the use of the court for the regular season when they could not get the Bristol High court.

There are many like myself who work nights and will be unable to a Sunday night?

4 ROOMS and BATH

By Marion Clyde McCarroll

No house pictured on this page to date has aroused more widespread interest among readers than the pre-fabricated home shown a few weeks ago, under the title "It Comes in a Package."

Because so many assumed that this house was immediately available, and wrote asking where it might be purchased, it might be well to repeat at this time what has already been said in connection with other houses described in these articles. This is, that the houses whose pictures appear are shown solely to give those interested in building a general idea of the many different styles that exist in the field of residential architecture. It is hoped that this may aid the many who will be building themselves new homes, when conditions are right, in selecting the architectural style which most appeals to them. If one has already decided upon the general type of house he would like to build, as, for instance, Colonial, Tudor, Cape Cod, Modern, to name only a very few, it will save time when the moment comes to talk over plans with his architect.

It's fun to play with ideas; to dream about how that new house is going to look both outside and inside. Many people keep scrapbooks of pictures and suggestions which they feel will be useful to look back over when they actually get down to the business of building, decorating and furnishing. So it is to help potential builders in this playing with ideas, rather than to offer specific houses for consideration, that these pictures are published.

So here are more pictures for those particularly interested in pre-fabricated homes. Homes of this type are not being turned out in plentiful supply as yet, but manufacturers of these "packaged" residences are hopeful of a much more productive year ahead.

In the meantime, it's nice to look over different types.

And Here is the Way the four rooms are arranged, together with suggestions for the convenient placing of the main pieces of furniture.

Four Rooms and Bath Are compactly contained in this cozy little pre-fabricated home with the big window in the living room entered from the front door. Beyond, the living room leads out to a center hall.

Backing Against the Front window of the living room is the davenport, flanked on each side by an end table and lamp. The writing desk then faces the other window, with a floor lamp on the approved side.

Instead of a Dining alcove, the designer of this house suggests that the dining table be placed against a wall of the kitchen in this way.

TULLYTOWN MAN IS IN WILLIOW FORCE

Pfc. Bernard Mazzocchi Serves As A Cook With Alaska Task Force

FEB. MANEUVERS

Pfc. Bernard Mazzocchi, cook connected with Co. A, 10th Engineers Combat Battalion, U. S. Army, is a member of Task Force Williwaw which has brought to a conclusion tough February maneuvers in Alaska.

Mazzocchi, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Mazzocchi, Main street, Tullytown, has been in the armed forces for 2 1/2 years.

In the fast ten days of rugged mountain climbing marches with pack equipment averaging about 85 pounds per man, tactical fire problems, and defensive position exposure tests, Task Force Williwaw personnel have proved that, as now equipped, man can survive and fight only for short periods in the wet wind-chilling cold of the Aleutians. To use the words of Williwaw's commanding officer, Col. Joseph D. Raney, "We must improve the capabilities of our equipment to better the conditions of the fighting man."

"We must have a light portable shelter for the infantry soldier, something that will withstand heavy rain, powdery fine snow, and hurcane winds. Our present shelter-half affair is quite evidently inadequate. The two-man mountain tent loses its waterproof qualities and tears in high winds. Tent poles snap like matchsticks. Tent pins pull out of the soggy ground. Tent ropes have snapped in many instances when tent pins did not give. Adequate shelter is a number one priority for cold-wet winter operations."

"Secondly, we need a tundra and mountain-crossing vehicle similar to that of the weasel or LVT-4 which will traverse unbelievably steep slopes, carry personnel or supplies, and be capable of withstanding severe punishment with a minimum of maintenance."

"With shelter and supply offering the major obstacles to successful operations in terrain and climate similar to that of the Aleutians, we find many other modifications necessary, for example: in clothing, the parka needs a deeper hood for better protection of the face; in rations, self-heating emergency cans would be ideal (the heating tablets as now issued are unsatisfactory); the shoulder pads for the well-known packboard are unsatisfactory; tanks need better optical equipment and modified clothing for personnel; the new automatic Garand rifle T20E2 needs a waterproof stock to prevent swelling. These are only a few of the modifications needed and being recommended to the Development Section, Army Ground Forces."

"Field tests on tank ammunition and recoilless weapons will very likely continue through March 15, 1947. Compiling of data and reports of tests will require about two months for completion. However, when actual test operations end on March 30th, it is expected that Task Force Williwaw will then return to California prior to submission of reports and eventual inactivation."

Temperature during the maneuver ranged from 12 degrees above zero to 39 degrees, a constant freezing and thawing which is typical of the Aleutians. During the 48 hour defensive position exposure tests, conducted by medical officers, Capt. George W. Green of Ita Bona, Mississippi, and Capt. Longstreet C. Hamilton, of Laurel, Miss., men of I Co., 15th Inf., stood guard in wet fox holes. The main complaint was cold feet.

Task Force Williwaw was assembled at Fort Ord, Cal., on June 28th, 1946, its general mission being to conduct tests of Army Ground Forces equipment and tactics under the cold-wet winter conditions existing at Adak in the Aleutians Oct. 1st, 1946 through March 30th, 1947.

A rigorous training and conditioning period, including the firing of organizational and available special weapons, took place at Fort Ord prior to embarkation for the Aleutians from the Port of San Francisco September 14th, 1946.

Upon arrival at Adak Island September 21st the "Williwaw" force moved into its base camp of quonset huts and underwent a period (Oct. 7th through Nov. 30th) of orientation as to the conduct of tests; acclimatization; further training and conditioning; planning for tests, considering the particular terrain, test area locations, and other existing conditions.

One five-day field exercise was conducted from November 12th through 16th mainly for the purpose of acclimatization and planning. Valuable basic data was accumulated during this initial pre-test phase.

Field tests of all equipment actually began December 1st, with the December test period highlighted by a ten-day field exercise during which it was proved beyond a doubt that suitable shelter, not currently available, must be developed to endure the high winds and driving snow, sleet, and rain prevalent in the Aleutian area.

During the month of January standard and special equipment tests reached their peak of activity (some of which were held in conjunction with tactical maneuvers January 16th through 25th). The February period climaxed the major portion of equipment tests and the field maneuvers.

Here's a strong "case" for title insurance right from the Court Records.

Recently, workmen—armed with a Court Order, saws and pick-axes—chopped 7½ feet off a woman's house because it encroached on her neighbor's property. All told, the owner lost sixty square feet of land and her home was wrecked. The whole tragedy was the result of a mix-up in her deed, due to a defective title somewhere along the line.

When you buy a home, make sure you own it. Ask your real estate broker or attorney to arrange for title insurance through Land Title. One modest premium insures your property as long as you continue to own it.
